People can promote Americanism and Love of Country by protecting our country with their words or their actions. Americans can promote Love of Country with words by speaking to others about what they like about our country. They can talk about the freedoms and liberties they have been granted by the government. Actions people can perform to promote Americanism can be things as simple as putting up a flag or as difficult as being a politician or serving in the military and giving up time with their families. Simply putting up our country's flag can show Americanism. Other ways that almost any citizen of the United States can promote Americanism and Love of Country are observing national holidays, saying the Pledge of Allegiance, or singing the National Anthem, "The Star Spangled Banner." Following the laws our country created to keep us safe and practicing the freedoms we have can also show Americanism. Americans can choose to serve in the armed forces to protect our freedoms and promote Americanism, freedom, and democracy. The fact that the men and women in the military choose to serve us and our country in spite of being separated from their families for extended periods of time shows their Love of Country. These service men and women fight to make sure our country is safe for the future generations. Similarly, people can choose to become politicians to protect the rights of American citizens and keep our country running smoothly. They sacrifice time with their families to show their Love of Country. Some, such as the President of the United States, sacrifice privacy to protect what we know as Americanism. In conclusion, there are many ways to promote Americanism and Love of Country in a small setting or a large one with both actions and words.
