NUMBERS THAT COUNT 2.5 MILLION

According to the latest data from the 2022 National Youth Tobacco Survey, over 2.5 million kids in the U.S. were current e-cigarette users and 85% of them used flavored products. Many are using these products most days or every day, a sure sign they're becoming addicted. Need help talking to your child about addiction to tobacco or other substances? Check out SAMHSA.org or call your child's school for help.

TIME IS A GREAT STORYTELLER

by Julianne Allen

Although I'm mostly Italian with a side of Polish- which sounds like a great idea for a restaurant!- I have a few strands of Irish DNA in me too. Even if I didn't, I'd still love the Irish proverbs that pop up frequently this time of year. They are clever, catchy, and often quite deep. Many leave room for interpretation, making them really relatable. The title of this piece is one such proverb: Time is a great storyteller.

One interpretation of that proverb might be that as we age (and our kids do too) our perspectives shift. When we recount experiences from our pasts, the stories we tell may change depending on how we remember them, and what lens we are using when we look back. Often, experiences that felt so difficult in the moment seem less awful given the passing of time. (Childbirth, I'm talkin' about you!) I've been thinking about time quite a bit lately because with my youngest child graduating in a few months, my time as a Bulldog parent is running out. If I'm lucky, there's still time to add to my story with new opportunities in my role as a semi-empty-nester. My nest won't be fully empty because I'll be raising a goldfish and a reptile when my daughter goes to college. I sure hope they do their own laundry because my new story was supposed to include a lot less of that.

How about this one: Don't be breaking your shin on a stool that's not in your way. Which I think means "don't borrow trouble" or "don't create problems where there are none" or, maybe the simplest meaning is "mind your own business." It's easy to get wrapped up in our kids' troubles. The older they get, the bigger some of their troubles seem to be. Sometimes we need to involve ourselves if it is a serious or potentially harmful situation. But for those smaller problems, we can resist the temptation to swoop in and trip over the stool that isn't in our way.

Have you ever worried about a problem or a disappointment that your child experienced long after they have moved on and gotten over it? Given the opportunity, most kids can solve their own small problems if afforded the time and given the tools to do so. Supporting our kids by empowering them to solve their own problems when it is feasible will really come in handy when they are on their own in the "real" world and things get much more complicated. Even the YOUNGEST Bulldogs are taught this skill. Ask your Kindergartener about the little green frog named Kelso. We start our problem-solving practice young in OF!

There may be an Irish saying for nearly every experience, happy or sad, in life. This website alone lists 140 and that is the tip of the Irish proverb-ial iceberg. The fact that there are so many speaks to the idea that we all experience some of the same highs and lows. No matter what we are going through as a parent, there is someone out there, somewhere, who went through it too- and maybe came up with an Irish proverb to explain it. So enjoy the time you have with your kids right now, equip them with the skills they need to jump over the stools in their way, and try not to dwell on the past or worry about the future.

Because there's no use boiling your cabbage twice.
